NOTES
The teachers at school always said that you were bright, and everyone says that you're likeable, but some people say that you're a bit too open-minded. You don't see it that way, of course; you just know that there's stuff going on in the world that most people don't know about. Just look at the Internet! (Okay, there's some stuff on there that's rubbish, but you've developed an instinct for what's good and what's a bit iffy.) Anyhow, you have a job as a research assistant in a big industrial technical library, but what matters to you is what has recently been showing up on the Web about, well, weird stuff with strange lights and bizarre mechanical junk and strange people (if they are people) appearing and disappearing. It's happening all over. It sounds like the government may be trying to crack down on things, too - to stop people finding out. But you reckon it may be important to find this stuff out. So you've become what people in the know call a "cog-finder"...
